The Flax Trust as a registered, charity, formed in Belfast in 1977, has as its mission the reduction and, if possible, the elimination of community tensions and religious prejudices by creative engagement in economic and social development, education and training with inter-community activities including culture, the Arts, sport, health, social programmes and personal development.

Sophie Colgan

Program Director
The Ireland-U.S. Council

Sophie Colgan is a native of Belfast, Northern Ireland. Living in New York having immigrated to America almost a decade ago, she has made her mark in her professional career as a young leader and innovator in several prestigious organizations spanning business and cultural affairs in the Irish American community. Currently, she is the Program Director for the Ireland-U.S. Council, the leading business organization serving the dynamic and important economic and business space between America and Ireland. She has also spearheaded recent efforts to reform the American Irish Historical Society. She earned wide acclaim for her successful efforts at broadening and developing community engagement projects for the Society.

She has been a key figure in a group of influencers who are working to block the sale of the Society's signature headquarters on Fifth Avenue in New York City. She shaped several community-based campaigns – none more telling than a community-wide Petition of support urging action to prevent this iconic jewel from passing from ownership of the community of Irish Americans not just in New York but throughout the United States.

Sophie has founded a fast-growing management consulting company SC Communications which offers strategic and management services in communications, strategy and event planning. She counts among her clients, successful companies such as CIE Tours International, the leading travel tour operator across the Atlantic into Ireland.

She hosts her own internet-based podcast “Navigating New York” interviewing guests who are immigrants to the United States. She discusses their personal and professional journey as they build new lives in America. She hopes that through these conversations she helps to make living in New York a little less overwhelming for new arrivals.

In 2015, Sophie was the New York Rose of Tralee, an International Festival in Ireland that recognizes the achievements of Irish women in Ireland and around the world. She also headlined The Meithel – a community effort to source and deliver PPE to frontline healthcare workers during the worst of the Covid Pandemic.

Recently, Sophie coordinated a charity run in Central Park in the aid of the Ukrainian National Women's League of America and an “Empowering Women in Sport” hybrid event to fundraise for local female amateur sports teams in New York.

In April, 2022 Sophie was honored by the Irish American Building Society for her contribution to the Irish American Community with “The Irish Spirit” Award.
